You Need A Dream Before Your Dream Can Come True

No matter what your background, where you were born, whether you have a master's degree from a prestigious university, an associate's degree from a community college, or a practical degree from the school of hard knocks, you, can become a Princess and date a wealthy Prince. But why would you want to? Have you really considered that?

If you have, then you have a dream that can be made to become a reality. Before you can achieve anything you must set goals. Your dream is considered the goal. As long as you can clearly define and understand your dream it can be made a reality, and this book will show you how to do it. In addition, it will show you how to set goals and achieve them.

I did, and over the years I was dating (before I settled down with my Prince Charming), I found many benefits to dating rich guys.

For starters, let's realize that there are a lot of things that are important in life—health, family, and friends to name a few. But our culture is driven by the dollar, and you can't overlook—or overestimate—the value of being financially secure.

From the day you're born to the day you die, either you have to pay for what you receive, or someone else has to do it for you. If you're fortunate enough to have wealthy parents, then you may be all set. If not, you have to make your way on your own, using everything you have at your disposal—your brains, your charm, your looks, and your skills (job related, as well as intimate!).

Even though money doesn't equal happiness, a lack of it can certainly result in misery. Just remember the last time your car broke down, or your home needed repair, or you had a dental bill and you didn't have the cash to handle it. With a rich partner, you will not likely be faced with that kind of situation again.

Ask any married couple what they fight about the most, and the number one issue will be money (or lack thereof). She needs new clothes for the office, he says they can't afford it. He wants to spend $100 on tickets to the big football game, and she says, "It's not in the budget." With all the expenses: rent or mortgage, car loans and insurance, credit card payments, health care, and more that most people are faced with each month, it's no wonder that they can't live the lives they've always dreamed of.

Imagine being able to afford a new car, a personal assistant, or a spa vacation without having to max out your credit cards, take out a high-interest bank loan, or make a deal with the devil. For example, I have a girlfriend who received a brand new Mercedes convertible for her birthday from the rich man she was dating (who, incidentally, she met over the Internet!).

Another woman I know had her nose reshaped, courtesy of her rich boyfriend. She became so beautiful that she was approached by a major modeling agency. Still another girl got her breasts done. I noticed that she got more attention because she became more confident and outgoing (not to mention shapelier!). These are extravagances that these particular girls would not have been able to afford on their own.

Dating rich men can also provide other benefits. For example, rich guys are able to take you out to the finest and most exclusive restaurants in town, and they can even whisk you away to an exotic land, perhaps even on their own private jet! A rich guy is more likely to give you a fabulous gift, like a car, jewelry, a piece of property, or clothes, or to pay for your shopping sprees than a guy who's paying off one credit card with a cash advance from another card.

The trappings of wealth do make an impression on others, often causing them to treat you with more respect. However, get clear right now that there's more to the game than money.

With all of the emphasis being made on money, don't lose sight of the fact that money can't buy you love. Keep in mind that the real princess will not sacrifice her dignity, self respect or integrity for the love of money. The real princess will be true to her heart and not choose a Prince simply because he has money. The real princess will find the ideal Prince who will respect her and love her and she will TRULY love him in return. This in return will bring both happiness and well being to The Princess as well as the Prince. If you follow my instructions in this book properly, you will learn that both can be had; money and love. The Princess will not sacrifice one for the other. And the man she chooses will be a Prince, someone who has money, but also knows how to treat the female with dignity and respect. He is protective in a caring way that is positive and supportive. He is generous with himself and his money.

Once you are dating your Prince, while money does get your foot in the door, it is definitely up to you to walk the rest of the way through. That means if you plan to really live the life of the wealthy, you need to continue to prove to those in wealthy circles—from the wealthy folks to those who serve them—that you know the rules and can play by them. This has nothing to do with how much money you have, it has to do with how you present who you are, earning people's respect by your behavior.

In the chapters ahead you will learn how to do that. Though it may at first require some effort on your part, it's easier than you may think.

Selling Your Soul (or Your Body)

If you have decided that being financially secure is of primary importance to you, here is an important point: Don't pick a guy only because of his money. You do not have to choose between love and money. You can have both! And to make it work, you must have love.

If you are looking for a quality relationship, make that your objective. Then go looking for it in the universe of wealthy men. Rich men can be handsome, charming, witty, sexy, and smart, if those are the characteristics you're looking for. Why not fall for a guy who has it all? After all, nothing feels better than to be in the company of a guy you adore, and who, incidentally, provides a feeling of safety and being taken care of by paying whatever costs pop up.

Someone once observed that it's just as easy to fall in love with a rich man as a poor man, and my experience has shown that it's true. So why get stuck in the baggage compartment of life when you can fly first-class!

As Donald Trump once said, "If you are going to think, then why not think BIG. There is nothing wrong with wanting the best. It simply means that you are setting very high standards in the lifestyle you have chosen to live and that you will not settle for second best. There will always be critics in anything that you do. Don't let what other people think get in the way of achieving what you really want. Keep in mind that the Princess has both: love and money.

Donna's Dating Files

You would be absolutely amazed at the perks you can be treated to by dating rich guys. They really do look at the world differently than most people simply because they think in numbers with more zeroes.

One of the more "out there" benefits I enjoyed as the result of dating rich guys was the opportunity to live in a 10,000-square-foot Bel-Air mansion, complete with pool and tennis court. The guy I was dating owned it, wasn't using it, didn't want the hassles of renting it just then, and he considered that I was doing him a favor by living in it and discouraging vandalism. This place was rumored to have been Elvis's home when he lived with Priscilla.

It was so big I brought a couple of girlfriends to live with me, and we stayed there for a year and a half. Part of the fun of living there was that it was like a sorority house. I lived on one side of the house and one of my friends lived on the other. Two other girls had their own private wings of the house.

We would throw parties and have barbecues with friends and family. We would go walking every morning by the beautiful Bel Air Hotel and run into interesting (and sometimes famous) people in the neighborhood.

It was a great place to live. However, there was a small downside. It supposedly had a ghost, and one of my beautiful girlfriends would run across it on occasion.

Katherine was a musician and had many songs from many different artists programmed into her keyboard. One day she was composing a song and all of a sudden Elvis's song "Love Me Tender" started to play from the keyboard. She hadn't pressed any buttons or selected any music, so it completely took her by surprise . . . the first time it happened. But when other Elvis songs—and none by other singers—randomly played for her, she became convinced he was there!

At least the place had a ghost that was compatible with the caliber of the neighborhood.

Mansions and Mercedes often go along with dating rich guys. Ghosts of this status are more unusual.
